Lehman College Writing Across the Curriculum invites you to…

Tracking Changes: A Cross-Disciplinary Symposium on Teaching Writing at Lehman College

Join us for a lively series of conversations and workshops where we consider:

What have Lehman faculty learned in the teaching of writing across the curriculum and in the disciplines? How can we make the revision of student writing more meaningful and successful? How can we support our students as online writers and learners? How can we use writing to spark deeper student interest in our course material?

Friday January 24, 2014
9:00 AM to 1:30 PM, Carman B-08

Dr. Mya Poe, Keynote Speaker
Developing Student Writers: Why Writing in the Disciplines Matters

Mya Poe is Assistant Professor of English at Northeastern University. Her research focuses on writing assessment, diversity, and writing in the disciplines. She is co-author of Learning to Communicate in Science and Engineering: Case Studies From MIT, which won the CCCC 2012 Advancement of Knowledge Award for the publication that most advances research in writing studies. She is also co-editor of Race and Writing Assessment and co-editor of the Oxford Short Guides to Writing in the Disciplines series. She is currently working on a book entitled The Consequences of Writing Assessment about the effects of writing assessment on diverse students and guest editing a special issue of Research in the Teaching of English on international writing assessment and diversity.

Plus, join your colleagues for roundtables on:

- Re-envisioning Revision and Research across the Disciplines: Liesl Jones (Biology), Elin Waring (Sociology), and Chuck Wooldridge (History).
- Digital Writing Across the Curriculum: Robyn Spencer (History), Bernardo Viano (Languages and Literatures), and Jessica Yood (English).
- Promoting Student Engagement through Writing: Cecilia Espinosa (Early Childhood & Childhood Education), Jessica Kahn (Social Work), and Janette Tilley (Music).
