Despite laws on the books that protect women, many countries lack the rule of law that translates these rights into legal action. I analyze the contemporary dynamics of femicide – killings of women – as well as feminicide: institutionalized killings of women because they are women in a context of impunity.