Photo by David Schulze

Casteel paints life-size portraits of Black men and women in domestic environments, street scenes and places of business. Casteel's subjects are known to her, whether familial, from her local community in Harlem, or newly acquainted through the process of sitting for a photograph. Casteel received an MFA from Yale, and has participated in recent exhibitions at Casey Kaplan, Crystal Bridges Museum, and MASS MoCA. Residencies include Yaddo, LMCC, The Studio Museum in Harlem, and Sharpe-Walentas. Her work has been featured in Artforum, The New York Times, Flash Art, Interview, The New Yorker, and Vogue. In 2019, Casteel will present a solo exhibition at the Denver Art Museum.
